Washington, DC 20515

November 19, 2013

The Honorable John H. Thompson
Director
U.S. Census Bureau
4600 Silver Hill Road
Suitland, MD 20746

Dear Mr. Thompson:

Today, the New York Post published a story by John Crudele that contained allegations from at least two sources who claim that employment data collected by the U.S. Census Bureau was fabricated. According to the story, the fabricated data was “collected” by Census Bureau employees working on the Current Population Survey (CPS). The U.S. Department of Labor uses the CPS to generate national and regional unemployment rates. The U.S. Congress uses the CPS to make crucial policy decisions, and the private sector uses the CPS to make important business decisions. Crudele’s sources allege that fabrication of employment data has been occurring for years, and that it is ongoing. Crudele wrote:

[T]he Census Bureau had caught an employee fabricating data that went into the unemployment report, which is one of the most closely watched measures of the economy. And a knowledgeable source says the deception went beyond that one employee—that it escalated at the time President Obama was seeking reelection in 2012 and continues today.<sup>1</sup>

These allegations are shocking. If true, there may be a systemic problem at the Philadelphia Regional Census Office, where the alleged data fabrication occurred. These allegations also raise the prospect that the use of fabricated data is a widespread problem. The Philadelphia Regional Census Office is just one of six offices nationwide that collect the data on which the unemployment rate is based. The implications of an unreliable unemployment figure are serious and far-reaching. The national unemployment rate affects everything from legislation on Capitol Hill, to Federal Reserve policy, to stock prices on Wall Street.

Crudele also spoke with the Philadelphia Regional Census Office employee who was caught fabricating data. That employee, Julius Buckmon, claimed that a supervisor instructed him to do so. Crudele wrote:

The Census employee caught faking the results is Julius Buckmon, according to confidential Census documents obtained by The Post.

Buckmon told me in an interview this past weekend that he was told to make up information by higher-ups at Census. . . . [The Department of] Labor requires Census to achieve a 90 percent success rate on its interviews—meaning it needed to reach 9 out of 10 households targeted and report back on their jobs status. Census currently has six regions from which surveys are conducted. The New York and Philadelphia regions, I'm told, had been coming up short of the 90 percent. Philadelphia filled the gap with fake interviews. 'It was a phone conversation—I forget the exact words—but it was, 'Go ahead and fabricate it' to make it what it was,' Buckmon told me.<sup>2</sup>

The fact that senior Census Bureau officials may have urged subordinate employees to fabricate data heightens our concern about these allegations. The Census Bureau's mission "is to serve as the leading source of quality data about the nation's people and economy."<sup>3</sup> If true, these allegations raise concerns that the Census Bureau is not fulfilling its mission. We need to better understand whether the Current Population Survey and other important Census Bureau data are reliable, and if not, whether Census Bureau officials knowingly and intentionally fabricated the data on which they are based.

It is also alleged that the Census Bureau never publicly disclosed the data fabrication or notified the Department of Labor.<sup>4</sup> Since the Bureau relies on the American public for its data, it is important that the Census Bureau cooperate with all investigations into this matter. Any erosion of trust by the Census Bureau would have an immediate impact on other important Census surveys such as the American Community Survey or the planning and implementation of the 2020 Decennial Census.

To assist the congressional investigation into this matter, please provide the following documents and information in unredacted form, covering the time period from January 1, 2010 through January 1, 2013, as soon as possible, but by no later than noon on December 3, 2013:

1. All documents and communications, including e-mails, between and among Census Bureau employees referring or relating to the collection of the Current Population Survey.
2. All e-mails listing Mr. Julius Buckmon as a to, from or cc.
3. A list of Mr. Buckmon's chain of command, including all supervisors.
4. All e-mails to or from Joal Crosby referring or relating to data falsification or the Current Population Survey.

<sup>4</sup> Crudele.

5. All documents and communications, including e-mails, provided to the Office of Inspector General relating to any investigation of Julius Buckmon.
6. All documents and communications, including e-mails, between and among Philadelphia Regional Census Office employees and U.S. Census Bureau headquarters staff referring or relating to the collection of unemployment data.
7. A list of Census Bureau officials with supervisory responsibility for the Current Population Survey.

It is reasonably foreseeable that Congress will request documents from additional U.S. Census Bureau employees in the Philadelphia Regional Office and in headquarters. Therefore, so that a full and complete record of relevant communications can be produced to Congress in response to an additional document request, please preserve all communications in all official and non-official e-mail accounts created since January 1, 2010, that can be reasonably anticipated to be subject to a request for production. Please instruct all U.S. Census Bureau employees and contractors who can reasonably be expected to have relevant documents to do the same.

For the purposes of this request, “preserve” means taking reasonable steps to prevent the partial or full destruction, alteration, testing, deletion, shredding, incineration, wiping, relocation, migration, theft, or mutation of electronic records, as well as negligent or intentional handling that would make such records incomplete or inaccessible.

The Committee on Oversight and Government Reform is the principal oversight committee of the House of Representatives and may at “any time” investigate “any matter” as set forth in House Rule X. The Joint Economic Committee is an advisory panel tasked with reviewing economic conditions and recommending improvements to economic policy. An attachment to this letter provides additional information about responding to this request.

When producing documents to the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform, please deliver production sets to the Majority Staff in Room 2157 of the Rayburn House Office Building and the Minority Staff in Room 2471 of the Rayburn House Office Building. The Oversight Committee prefers, if possible, to receive all documents in electronic format.

The Honorable John H. Thompson
